1 LAWMAKERS RAISE CONCERNS OVER AT&T-TIME WARNER DEAL

The telecom-media giant that would be formed if federal regulators approve AT&T Inc.'s $85.4 billion purchase of Time Warner Inc. raises antitrust issues, Democratic vice presidential candidate Tim Kaine and several U.S. lawmakers said on Sunday. Kaine said lawmakers and regulators would have to review the deal and "get to the bottom" of questions over whether the merger would decrease competition. "I'm pro-competition," Kaine said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "Less concentration, I think, is generally helpful especially in the media." Kaine, Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton's running mate, said he had not had a chance to review the details of the deal. The Clinton campaign did not respond to a request for comment. 2 SON: TRUMP WOULD '100 PERCENT' ACCEPT ELECTION RESULT IF IT'S FAIR

Donald Trump will "100 percent" accept the results of the U.S. election if it is fair, his son Eric Trump said on Sunday. "I think what my father is saying is, 'I want a fair election,'" Eric Trump said on ABC's "This Week." "If it's a fair outcome, he will absolutely accept it. There's no question about that." With national opinion polls showing Clinton with an increasing lead over Trump ahead of the Nov. 8 election, Donald Trump has repeatedly said the election is being "rigged" against him. He has not offered evidence and numerous studies have shown that the U.S. election system, which is decentralized and run by the states, is sound. At last week's debate with Democratic rival Hillary Clinton, Trump challenged a cornerstone of American democracy by refusing to commit to honoring the result of the U.S. election. REUTERS

3 83 DEMONSTRATORS ARRESTED AT N. DAKOTA PIPELINE

More than 80 protesters were arrested on Saturday after clashing with police near a pipeline construction site in North Dakota, according to the local sheriff's department, which said pepper spray was used on some demonstrators. The 83 protesters were arrested near the site of the Dakota Access pipeline on numerous charges ranging from assault on a peace officer to rioting and criminal trespass, the Morton County Sheriff's Department said in a statement. Law enforcement was alerted early Saturday morning to an SUV on private property near the pipeline construction site and found that four men had attached themselves to the vehicle, according to the sheriff's department. Police removed the men from the SUV before arresting them. REUTERS

MERCURY DROPS

Bolaris' Weather Watch

JOHN BOLARIS
@weathersavior

Talk about a roller coaster ride of temperatures.

All last week, temperatures were at summer-time, record-high levels in some cases, as many locations busted into the mid-80s.

The Jekyll and Hyde weather was in full force this past weekend, as warm air surged up the East Coast on Friday at the same time the strongest cold front of the season was barreling down upon us from the Great Lakes on Friday night into Saturday.

Folks were in weather shock on Saturday morning as the mercury plummeted some 25 degrees, and the wind was howling out of the northwest and gusting over 50 mph as we scrambled for our winter coats and hats.

It looks like it could have been summer's last hurrah as we get ready for the coldest blast of the season to date.

The mercury today should turn out to be the warmest of this work week. The chilliest air mass of the season so far will swing in tonight as readings start to dip back into the 30s and lower 40s.

The coldest nights will take place on Tuesday and Wednesday, and the cities of Boston, New York and Philadelphia will see readings dip into the 30s at the same time a few outlying suburbs will plunge into the 20s. Plenty of frost and freezes will take place across a good chunk of the Northeast through the middle of this week.

Grab the umbrellas by the second half of this week as the chill will be replaced by needed rain for Thursday, which should linger into Friday for Boston.

Right now, it appears the roller coaster ride of temperatures will kick in again as readings by this weekend will nudge back into more seasonable levels.

The long-range outlook for Halloween: ghoulish stiff breeze, but bone-dry conditions.

Today: Early shower, windy, High 56

Tuesday: Chilly, windy, High 46

Wednesday: Chill lingers, High 46

Thursday: Late showers, High 51

Sunday: Windy, 53.

American Airlines: 2 people gain 'unauthorized access' on Philly-Boston flight Sunday

An American Airlines flight from Philadelphia International Airport destined for Boston was delayed Sunday morning after a security breach that allowed two people to gain unauthorized access to the plane, airline officials said.

A passenger told WCVB Boston that the captain of American Airlines Flight 1655 said the jetway door was left unlocked overnight. A non-English speaking couple walked onto the plane around 6 a.m. and stowed their luggage.

The flight was scheduled to depart Philadelphia at 8 a.m., but airline officials told 6ABC that out of safety, they would switch out aircraft.

"Two passengers gained unauthorized access to one of our aircrafts earlier this morning. Out of an abundance of caution, we are utilizing a different aircraft for the flight to Boston. We apologize to our customers for the inconvenience."

Foul play is not suspected, and the entry appears to have been an accident, according to 6ABC. Officials said that Philadelphia International Airport is responsible for making sure the jetway is locked.

The airport said its investigating the incident.

Flight 1655 took off from Philly just after 11 a.m., three hours after its scheduled departure.

Want to vote early in Boston? Here's how

For the first time, Massachusetts voters will be able to cast their ballots before Election Day.

Early voting in the state opens today and runs through Nov. 4, and can be completed in person or via mail. For Bostonians, City Hall will conduct early voting sessions Monday through Friday starting at 9 a.m. Other municipal buildings and residences will hold sessions at various times and during the weekends for convenience.

View a full list of locations and times in Boston at boston.gov.

For voters who want to cast their ballot by mail, an application must be submitted to the city Elections Department before Nov. 4 by mail or email. A ballot will then be mailed, which voters can mail back or drop off in person.

GETTY IMAGES

Voters who submit a ballot early will not be able to change their vote on Election Day, which is Nov. 8.

Voting times and locations are determined by municipality, and some will only have one early voting location, so voters are encouraged to check with their town for details or to visit massearlyvote.com.

Suspect in shooting of Chelsea teen held without bail

A suspect accused of firing shots that injured a teen boy inside his Chelsea home on Wednesday is being held without bail on a previous charge of assault and battery on a police officer, the Boston Herald reported.

Christian Garcia, 19, who was identified by a witness as an EastSide gang member named "Pumba," is suspected of firing six to eight shots toward a group of men near Bellingham and Shawmut streets Wednesday night.

A stray bullet went through a nearby wall, striking a 13-year-old boy in the back as he watched TV inside his home.

Garcia was arrested Friday and bail on an open case in Malden was revoked. He pleaded not guilty to charges that include assault and battery with a firearm. He is due in court Nov. 14. NIKKI M. MASCALI

Tour bus crash in Southern California kills 13 people

A tour bus crashed into the back of a tractor-trailer on a Southern California highway before dawn on Sunday, killing at least 13 people and injuring 31, an NBC affiliate reported.

The bus was traveling west on Interstate 10 when the crash occurred near Palm Springs, a city about 100 miles east of Los Angeles, the television station reported.

The Riverside County Coroner's Office confirmed 13 people aboard the bus were killed, the station said.

Photographs from the scene showed the front of the tour bus wedged inside the back of the trailer, with emergency workers using metal ladders to reach the inside of the bus. A tow truck was used to separate the vehicles, local media including the Desert Sun newspaper reported.

The injured were being treated at local hospitals, while all westbound lanes of the interstate were closed near the crash, according to the reports.

The bus had left the Red Earth Casino in Salton City, California, and was headed to Los Angeles when the crash was reported to the California Highway Patrol at 5:17 a.m., the NBC affiliate said. REUTERS

BRIEF

Iran's president says US election offers only bad or worse choice

Iranian President Hassan Rouhani said on Sunday the choice offered to voters in the U.S. presidential election was between "bad and worse" and that harsh exchanges in the debates pointed to a lack of morality in America, Tehran's arch adversary.

"America claims it has more than 200 years of democracy, and they have had 50 presidential elections, but there is no morality in that country," Rouhani said in a speech, carried live by state television.

"You saw the presidential debates, how they talk ... how they accuse and mock [each other]," Rouhani told a crowd gathered at a stadium during his visit to the eastern city of Arak.

Rouhani said a head of state had asked him during his visit to the United Nations in September about who he preferred between Republican candidate Donald Trump and his Democratic rival Hillary Clinton.

"I said should I prefer bad over worse or worse over bad?" said Rouhani, a pragmatist politician and cleric who may run for re-election in Iran's presidential polls in May 2017. REUTERS

PANIC, POLLS AND POPULISM

Ever been stuck in a really awful, really long movie you can't leave because you're trapped in a middle seat, the crowd is cranky and a few in your group are into it? That's this election. Still, as America squirms through the final scenes, here are my three things to watch this week:

1. CHECK, PLEASE!

Maybe it was the lewd talk, maybe the venomous debates — whatever the cause, the GOP walk away from Donald Trump could turn into a stampede this week. The surest sign is a smattering of new ads which say nothing about the party's nominee, but are pushing for the re-election of Republican members of Congress because, you know, checks and balances. It's not an explicit admission the Dems will keep the White House, but it's pretty close. Unless Trump reverses the rapid descent of his campaign and fast, watch for this to become the party's chief talking point — and look for many more of those commercials.

Opinion

CNN's Tom Foreman is the author of the book "My Year of Running Dangerously." @tomforemancnn

2. GRUMPY TRUMP/ HAPPY HILLARY

Remember when Trump looked like he was having the time of his life on the campaign trail? Laughing. Smiling. Making jokes about crying babies. Now, not so much ... and with good reason. The polls show the gap between Trump and Hillary Clinton is turning into a chasm. Of course Trump and his crew are dismissing the numbers, but some Dems are worried too — afraid if it looks like a sure win for Clinton, many voters who are backing her just to oppose Trump may not show up. Watch for Dem talkers to keep pounding the "every vote matters" mantra.

3. ROUNDING THE BASES

If you live in what still passes for a battleground, brace yourself. The campaigns will be relentless this week in terms of ads, visits and surrogates in such places. It may be hard for partisans to believe there are still "undecideds" out there, but remember: Scads of voters have been very turned off by both candidates — turning even a few of them back on in a critical state could make all the difference.

DJ Khaled snapchats the birth of his son

If you follow DJ Khaled on Snapchat, you now that the hip-hop producer lives in his own world filled with positivity, celebration, luxury, self-affirmations and wisdom.

But on Sunday morning, he did something he'd never done before. Followers got to witness the birth of Khaled's first son, complete with a DJ Khaled soundtrack to accompany it. The series of snaps included his girlfriend spread eagle and pushing, the baby's first cry and the proud pappa getting stamped with his son's footprint. It's safe to say that this is probably the best DJ Khaled exclusive to date.

How politics can undermine your love life

LAURIE DAVIS EDWARDS

Single and Swiping

Laurie Davis Edwards is the founder of eFlirt, an online dating concierge service, and the best-selling author of "Love @ First Click: The Ultimate Guide to Online Dating."

"He's for Trump and I'm for Hillary," my client shared with me. She laughed as she added, "and I forgive him for that."

These days, it's rare for someone to be so accepting. Politics were previously taboo to discuss on a first date — but now my inbox is flooded with messages from clients saying things like, "Can you believe I went out with a Trump supporter? I've decided that's a deal breaker for me now."

Politics have divided us, even in our pursuit of love. Often, your political party is an indication of your values — and when you and your date's values don't sync, it can easily become a deal breaker.

The reasons people choose one candidate over the other are dramatically varied this year. It can speak to values — but it doesn't necessarily. For example, some have chosen to vote for Clinton because they don't want Trump in office. And others have chosen Trump because they want radical change. These varying reasons are inordinate and the candidates don't necessarily represent their party's values as clearly as in the past.

A client of mine recently went on a date with someone who supported the opposing candidate, and he wasn't upset at who she was voting for — but he was upset at the contentious attitude she showed during the conversation. He won't be asking her out again.

Yet some married couples will vote for two different candidates. Approach political discussions from a place of curiosity rather than conflict. If you set this tone, your date likely will follow. If they don't, try something like: "Hey, I want you to know I'm not judging you. I'm actually curious about your opinion, and I'd love to tell you about mine because it's fun to discuss. So let's keep it a healthy debate, OK?"

Should this emotional presidential race that lasts for only a few more weeks stop you from falling in love? Sometimes we need to learn to laugh at our differences, rather than letting them hold us back.

Ryan Lochte still facing charges

Ryan Locthe's Rio woes are still ongoing. The 32-year-old Olympian has been trying hard to move on from his infamous robbery scandal during the 2016 games: He's doing well as a contestant on "Dancing with the Stars" and he recently proposed to his model girlfriend. But his legal drama is far from over.

Lochte and U.S. swim teammate Jimmy Feigen were both charged with filing false police reports. Lochte's legal team requested that the criminal case against him be dropped and TMZ reports that the request was denied by a judge. If that's not bad enough, the judge transferred the case from the Court of Justice to the higher Ministry of Justice. It's expected that Lochte will have to pay a handsome fine. Feigen coughed up $11,000 in lieu of jail time. Let's hope there's some "DWTS" prize money in store for Lochte.

Miley Cyrus campaigns for Hillary on university campus

Miley Cyrus was up to her usual tricks over the weekend, but this time it was for a good cause — if you're Team Hillary. The 23-year-old crashed George Mason University's campus over the weekend to encourage the co-eds to get out and vote for Hillary Clinton on Nov. 8. In true campaign style, she knocked on doors in the dorms to spread her message.

In true Miley style, she wore a baby blue fur coat and a bow-shaped bandeau crop top, and danced in the dorm windows.

Miley's exit was a wild scene with about a dozen security officers clearing the way between a rowdy crowd. She left in a police escorted motorcade. Tighter security would have only been found if Hillary herself had shown up.

DISTRIBUTION NOTICE:

TRYING TO KEEP UP: Rapid shipments of heavy packages containing Vault Bricks loaded with valuable .999 solid U.S. State Silver Bars are flowing around the clock from the private vaults of the Lincoln Treasury to U.S. State residents who call 1-866-626-3962 Ext.FMS1596 to beat the 48-hour deadline.

U.S. State Silver Bars go to residents in 6 states

U.S. residents who find their state listed below in bold get first dibs at just the $59 minimum set for state residents while all non state residents must pay $134, if any silver bars remain

NATIONWIDE – The phone lines are ringing off the hook.

That's because U.S. State Silver Bars sealed away in State Vault Bricks are being handed over to MA, NH, VT, RI, CT and NY residents at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury for the next 2 days.

This is not a misprint. For the next 2 days residents who find their state on the Distribution List above in bold are getting individual State Silver Bars at just the state minimum of $59 set by the Lincoln Treasury. That's why everyone should be taking full Vault Bricks loaded with five U.S. State Silver Bars before they're all gone.

And here's the best part. Every MA, NH, VT, RI, CT and NY resident who gets at least two Vault Bricks is also getting free shipping and free handling. That's a real steal because all other state residents must pay over six hundred dollars for each State Vault Brick.

Just a few weeks ago, nobody knew that the only U.S. State Silver Bars locked away in the private vaults of the Lincoln Treasury would be allocated to the Federated Mint for a limited release to residents in 6 states. Every single one of the 50 U.S. State Silver Bars are date numbered in the order they ratified the Constitution and were admitted into the Union beginning in the late 1700s.

"As Executive Advisor to the Lincoln Treasury I get paid to deliver breaking news. So, for anyone who hasn't heard yet, highly collectable U.S. State Silver Bars are now being handed over at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury to residents in 6 states who beat the offer deadline, which is why I pushed for this announcement to be widely advertised," said Mary Ellen Withrow, the emeritus 40th Treasurer of the United States of America.

"These bars are solid .999 pure fine silver and will always be a valuable precious metal which is why everyone is snapping up as many as they can before they're all gone," Withrow said.

There's one thing Withrow wants to make very clear. State residents only have two days to call the Toll Free Order Hotlines to get the U.S. State Silver Bars.

"These valuable U.S. State Silver Bars are impossible to get at banks, credit unions or the U.S. Mint. In fact, they're only being handed over at state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury to MA, NH, VT, RI, CT and NY residents who call the Toll Free Hotline before the deadline ends two days from today's publication date", said Timothy J. Shissler, Executive Director of Vault Operations at the private Lincoln Treasury.

To make it fair, special Toll Free Overflow Hotlines have been set up to ensure all residents have an equal chance to get them.

Rapid shipments to state residents are scheduled to begin with the first calls being accepted at precisely 8:30am today.

"We're bracing for all the calls and doing everything we can to make sure no one gets left out, but the U.S. State Silver Bars are only being handed over at just the state resident minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury for the next two days or until they're all gone, whichever comes first. For now, residents can get the U.S. State Silver Bars at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury as long as they call before the order deadline ends," confirmed Shissler.

"With so many state residents trying to get these U.S. State Silver Bars, lines are busy so keep trying. All calls will be answered," Shissler said. ■

Pictured right are the State Silver Vault Bricks containing the only U.S. State Silver Bars known to exist with the double forged state proclamation. MA, NH, VT, RI, CT and NY residents are authorized to get individual State Silver Bars at just $59 state resident minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury. That's why everyone should be taking full Vault Bricks loaded with five State Silver Bars before they're all gone. And here's the best part. Every resident who gets at least two Vault Bricks is also getting free shipping and free handling. That's a real steal because all other state residents must pay over six hundred dollars for each State Vault Brick.

Christian Slater says "King Cobra" is his "Gypsy"

He plays a sort of Mama Rose of the gay porn industry.

KATE MOONEY

"King Cobra" is a campy thriller based on a real-life murder scandal in the gay porn industry that took place in the early part of the century. Christian Slater stars as Stephen (based on the late Bryan Kocis), a closeted gay-porn mogul who grooms a young talent, Sean Paul Lockhart, aka, Brent Corrigan (Garrett Clayton), whom he also falls in love with.

Corrigan soon feels smothered and exploited by Stephen and attempts to break out on his own, but he's limited by the terms of his contract. When rival porn producers the Viper Boys—Joe (James Franco, who also produced the film) and his lover, Harlow (Keegan Allen)—try to poach Corrigan, violence ensues.

The film, written and directed by Justin Kelly ("I Am Michael") has drawn comparisons to "Boogie Nights." Fun fact: Throwback actors Alicia Silverstone (who, in "Clueless" famously says, "Let's blow off seventh and eighth, go to the mall, have a calorie fest, and see the new Christian Slater") and Molly Ringwald co-star.

We sat down with Slater, who has been busy playing mind games with viewers as Mr. Robot in the eponymous USA Network show, to talk about the film and competing with James Franco in the sex-scenes department. The 47-year-old actor, while more known for playing heartthrob/villains, a la "Heathers" — "it's these damn eyebrows, I guess," he says — tells us that for his largely sympathetic turn as Stephen, he drew on Mama Rose from "Gypsy."

What drew you to the project?

I worked with James Franco on "The Adderall Diaries," and we got along very well. He presented me with this project and I thought, "Wow, this is unique and different than anything I've done before." So I was thrilled, excited and nervous.

I really liked the character. I thought, if I was going to go into something like this, I would have to identify with the human, and I did. I liked that it wasn't stereotypical. [Justin Kelly and I] talked about the sexual aspects and he said he was going to be handling everything with dignity and grace. That was the sense I got, and that he was letting me off the hook a little bit — James Franco would be covering it, he was going to do more of the heavy lifting there. And then I got competitive! I felt like if I was going to get involved with this, I wanted to have some fun and take some risks.

Your portrayal of Stephen is maybe more sympathetic than his real-life counterpart. As an actor, you're probably better known for playing villains.

I did "Bed of Roses"— I was extraordinarily romantic in that. I did "Untamed Heart"— it was like "Beauty and the Beast"! I save the girl! In "Broken Arrow," I was the action figure. I've done all kinds of things. But for some reason ... it's these damn eyebrows, I guess. There's definitely an element of mischievousness and anarchy to a great deal of the characters that I play, with "Heathers" and "Pump up the Volume."

With this role, I looked at "Star 80" as a good template for this project, and "Boogie Nights" and "Gypsy" as well. There was that element of being the Mama Rose in this film. This was my "Gypsy," and Brent was Gypsy Rose Lee, I was gonna make him a star. The Ethel Merman moment I have with him [singing] in the car, was definitely one of those improv moments, because that was something I grew up with. My mother was always singing and talking about Gypsy Rose Lee and Mama Rose.

Another education

Neo Americana duo Jamestown Revival continue their wanderings with a nationwide tour for their second album.

LINDA LABAN
letters@metro.us

Jamestown Revival felt they needed to explain a thing or two about the album they were about to release, so the Austin-based duo wrote a letter to their fans. Now signed to Republic Records, and with a hit single, the anthemic "California," and a noted album, "Utah," behind them, and with their second record, "The Education of a Wandering Man," done, the harmonizing high-lonesome twosome posted the letter on their website, explaining the creative struggle after their sudden fame. The pair, Jonathan Clay and Zach Chance, spoke with us from Austin, just a few days before their second album was released on Oct. 7. They had about a week of rehearsals and then off they would go, a-wandering, on tour with their band.

You say in your open letter that you struggled with getting going on your second record. Was there any one thing that helped you switch your mind-set from stuck?

Jonathan Clay: Yeah, it was "Love is a Burden." It was a metaphor for what had happened with "California." That song has afforded us opportunities, but it almost paralyzed us because we wondered, would we ever write anything as good as California again? It was a burden, a hindrance in a way. We just had to let it go.

Zach Chance: We wanted to continue to tell the story. We had a bunch of false starts; we did have some wastebasket days. But once we got back to Austin, we found that we did have something to say, instead of reaching for something to say.

Clay: Zach and I can't write a song unless we do have something to say.

Is the song "American Dream" also about disillusionment?

Clay: It also came out of feeling down. I was at home with my wife: we have a baby and a new home, but the AC broke and the roof was leaking, and all these things felt so oppressive. Then, we were out riding our horses and we stopped by a tree, and this songbird was sitting there singing his little song. We thought what a simple, beautiful existence. We just asked ourselves, this is what we work for, all these problems? We work very hard to achieve this level of complication in our lives.

You two have known each other for half your lives; did you meet in high school in Magnolia, Texas?

Chance: Yup, trigonometry class. I remember my first day at school and it was like "Fast Times at Ridgemont High"—I feared for my education! But we met and we wrote our first song at age 15.

Clay: That one's locked in a vault somewhere. I don't know if it will ever see the light of day.

Jamestown Revival's 2014 debut, "Utah," was named for the minimalist makeshift recording studio they used to record the album. HARPER SMITH

Build a better workplace

Two books offer expert tips for creating and sustaining a positive environment at the office.

SARA FEINSTEIN
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

ISTOCK

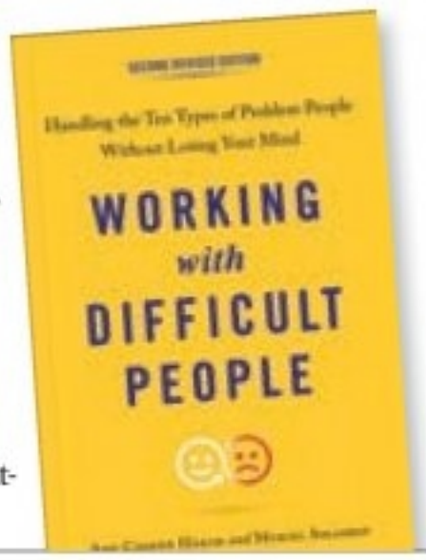
Shola Richards' workplace had become so unbearably toxic that he considered driving his car off the freeway overpass.

After two years at a "soul-destroying" job in education, this — contemplating suicide — was the breaking point. He finally quit to begin a career helping others struggling in similarly unhealthy work environments.

"I thought to myself, 'Who's doing something about this?'" says Richards. "When I realized nobody was — well, not to the level I wanted, anyway — I decided to lead the journey myself."

Amy Cooper Hakim experienced a less daunting situation with her first post-college job in the staffing industry. The cutthroat, hostile environment forced her to leave after only a month. But it was her grandmother's book about dealing with challenging people at work—which she has now expanded and revised into "Working With Difficult People"—that inspired her. She threw herself into a mountain of research and eventually landed a job in organizational psychology. "Basically, I help employees and employers get along better," she says.

With the advice of these workplace experts, we've compiled tips for fostering a positive office environment.



Maintain respect

"Respect is a basic skill we strive to enforce in our children from a young age," explains Richards, "but somehow forget about as we get older." It's typically the guiding principle in a kindergarten classroom and should also be in the workplace — but not just when it's convenient. "It has to be practiced consistently and relentlessly," says Richards. He suggests people take the time to write out "respect commitments," explicit promises that can be referred to. He has one that he reminds himself of daily: "When in conflict with someone else, I will have the courage to speak to the person, not about the person."

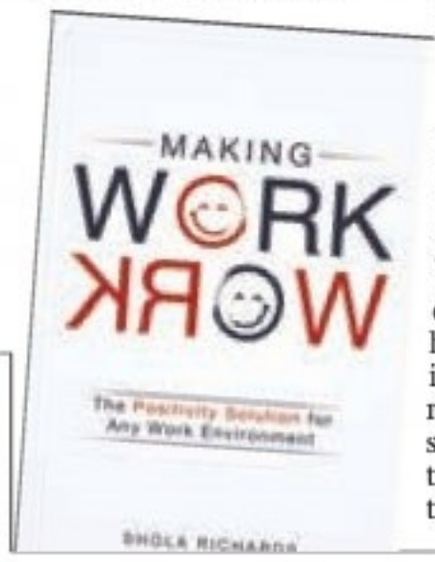
"When it comes to respect, it all boils down to taking ownership of your behavior: attitude and words and realizing how they affect others."

Be assertive

When it comes to dealing with bullies in the workplace, rather than sit back and suffer in silence, Richards recommends being frank. "Having direct conversations with people who are being difficult and simply asking them to stop or modify their behavior really brings about positivity," he says. "A lot of people are not confrontational by nature and want to avoid uncomfortable situations." Further, bullies in particular tend to prey on silent victims, adds Hakim. Her tip — a piece of advice from a middle-school principal — is easy: Look them in the eye and tell them, "Thank you. I didn't ask for your opinion."

Establish strong leadership

A proper leader should make sure that employees feel comfortable in their workplace by setting a tone of positive morale, camaraderie and respect, says Hakim. After all, employees are more likely to stick around when they're part of a welcoming, friendly and fun environment. "Leaders who recognize the people component — people over task — are able to develop a sense of commitment," she says. "Employees should not be viewed as simply cogs in a wheel whose main goal is to generate profit for the company."



Take emotion out

When we're upset, we tend to let our emotions drive our decision-making, says Hakim. Rather than immediately react, consider the person's tendencies. "If you're able to take the emotion out and look at it from a logical standpoint and apply critical thinking instead," explains Hakim, "then you're really able to get what you need from that person." Plus, "You catch more flies with honey." By responding in a mature, kind, and respectful manner, she says, "you're also likely to avoid problems down the road."

Will more colleges start offering three-year degrees?

A report urges universities to consider shorter programs.

LAKSHMI GANDHI
@LakshmiGandhi
lakshmi.gandhi@metro.us

A three-year degree may cut down on your tuition, but it won't be any less work. ISTOCK

It's college-application season, which means students and parents around the country are having sometimes difficult conversations about college costs and student loans.

As a result, many educators and students are wondering: Does college need to be four years long? A recent report from the New Jersey legislature strongly suggests making three-year degrees an option in order to allow students to save tuition dollars while they pursue their dream careers. A handful of schools across the country have already begun offering shorter programs for a variety of majors.

"It's very much a niche program. A lot of students and parents perk up when they hear it's an option," says Bruce Logan, associate dean of Lesley University's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "It really is an opportunity for students to save time and money." The university in Cambridge, Massachusetts, began offering a three-year bachelor's degree in 2011.

Logan cautions prospective students that an accelerated degree wouldn't work for everyone. Here's what students weighing a three year program should think about before taking the plunge.

Do you have a postgraduation plan already?

"Students who are drawn to our program already have their eye on a grad program they'd like to enter or already have an idea of the field they want to enter," says Logan. If you are planning to experiment with different courses and career paths while in school, a three-year program will not work for you. Students considering an accelerated path need to weigh their time and family commitments carefully.

Remember, the course load is the same

At programs like Lesley's, students take a full semester of classes for two summers in addition to spending two academic years on campus. "The vast majority of our students have to work in the summer to earn money," Logan notes. "Going to school full-time in the summer really isn't an option for them." While weighing three-year programs, students and families should discuss whether they can give up the potential earnings of a summer job. It's also important to seriously think about what it would mean to be in school all summer while your peers are at the beach, traveling, or doing summer internships.

You'll be something of a pioneer

Because three-year degree programs are still so new, students who choose one won't have a lot of peers in the same boat. "We graduate three to four three-year students every year," says Logan, who notes that all students take classes together. "It's a small number, but it's a valuable experience for students who choose it."

Patriots handle short-handed Steelers

The Pats improved to 6-1 with their win over the Big Ben-less Steelers Sunday.

ERIC WILBUR
@MetroBOS
sports@metro.us

It's anybody's guess what a healthy Ben Roethlisberger might have added.

But the Patriots will have to wait until a possible playoff rematch to discover how the Steelers' starting quarterback might improve what they found in Pittsburgh on Sunday afternoon, a 27-16 win, improving New England's season record to 6-1, the best mark in the NFL.

Patriots quarterback Tom Brady threw for 222 yards and two touchdowns in the win, only improving on the improbable talk that he's among the league's MVP candidates despite missing the first four games of the 2016 season. He started the game on fire, finishing the first quarter a perfect 7-for-7, throwing for 66 yards and one touchdown. His first incompletion came on an attempted pass to White with 13:18 remaining in the second quarter. He was 9-of-9 for 90 yards up to that point.

In the first quarter, Brady found running back James White for a 19-yard reception, and a 7-0 Patriots lead. LeGarrette Blount extended the lead to 14-0 with a three-yard rumble onto the end zone with 10:58 remaining in the first half, the culmination of an 11-play drive that took 4:46 off the clock.

That's when the Steelers woke up.

Steelers backup quarterback Landry Jones, starting for the injured Roethlisberger, found Darius Heyward-Bey in the top-left corner of the end zone to cut New England's lead in half. The duo repeated the act near the end of the half, but a holding call brought the touchdown back. That led to a 42-yard field goal attempt for Pittsburgh kicker Chris Boswell. No good.

Boswell found redemption by nailing a 32-yard field goal as the half expired with the Patriots leading by four. The Steelers kicker opened up the scoring in the second half, hitting a 46-yard field goal with 8:44 remaining in the third. That made it 13-straight points for the Steelers, only trailing the Patriots by one. The Patriots immediately responded with a drive that ended with Brady finding Rob Gronkowski, held to one catch at that point, for a 36-yard touchdown. It was Gronkowski's 68th career touchdown reception, tying Stanley Morgan's franchise record.

Instead of adding to the seven-point lead though, Stephen Gostkowski kicked more fear into the increasing worry about his season, missing an extra point for a second-straight week.

The biggest threat to the Patriots' lead came soon after, when Julian Edelman, who had been heavily-utilized by Brady in the game (nine catches on 10 targets for 60 yards), fumbled a kickoff return, giving the Steelers the ball in Patriots territory. But facing a fourth-and-two, the Steelers elected not to go for it, and instead went to Boswell, who missed a 54-yard field goal attempt. The Patriots still had a 27-16 advantage with less than 10 minutes remaining.

The Patriots visit Buffalo next. The Bills fell to the Miami Dolphins, 28-25, on Sunday. With their win in Pittsburgh, New England now has a two-game lead on Rex Ryan's team in the AFC East.

Aries Stay focused on getting what you want. A financial gain looks promising, but may come with strings attached. A personal commitment will help you lay out your plans.

Taurus You need to keep your head down and your mind on your work. Don't let emotional matters escalate into something that you can't control.

Gemini A partnership can lead to good fortune if you are up-front about your feelings, expectations and desires. Glide into the future with someone you can count on.

Cancer Overspending on or being too generous with friends or children isn't necessary. You can have just as much fun if you choose entertainment that isn't costly.

Leo Take a moment to refresh your appearance and to do something special that will make you feel good. A loved one will make a move that will change your life.

Virgo Keep a strict budget and a close watch over your possessions and assets. Get involved in an event that will give you a platform to present what you have to offer.

Libra Baby steps will be necessary. If you leap without looking, you will end up in debt or in the middle of a dispute. Focus on personal improvements that fit your budget.

Scorpio Someone will intervene or take charge if you hesitate or show signs of uncertainty. Be confident and unafraid to take an unusual approach to whatever you do.

Sagittarius You must be honest with yourself and with others. If you candidly share your hopes and dreams, your personal and professional lives will benefit.

Capricorn Don't take on more responsibility when you should be getting rid of the dead weight you've been carrying. Stick to the tried and true methods that worked before.

Aquarius Don't give in to someone else when you should be doing your own thing. An opportunity is apparent, and you don't want to miss out.

Pisces Proceed with caution. If you are misleading or your motives are questionable, you will be excluded from something important. Stick to the truth. EUGENIA LAST
